Remarks:

6. The consumer prices indicated above for food and clothing are average and the figures may fluctuate. The prices on kolkhoz markets may be twice or thrice the regular prices, and on the black market even higher. The reason is that it is not always possible to obtain desired items in the government stores.
7. The monthly earnings also are average and figures may run considerably higher than stated in the above list, depending on the place, the nature of the job, and the worker himself. Some of the stakhanovites and udarniks at the Baku petroleum refineries earn as high as 2,500 to 3,000 rubles per month. However, the norms (quotas) of these workers are very high and do not apply to the majority of workers and technicians. The police character of the Soviet "democratic" government is well illustrated by the earnings of a militiaman (policeman), who receives much more than an average teacher or doctor.
8. Automobiles are now sold without restriction in the USSR. The only requirement is that a buyer possess a driver's license and register with the transportation section of the militia, where vehicle tags are issued.
9. The best hotel in Tbilisi is the Novy Tbilisi, which has a very good restaurant. Prices for a room and bath are as high as 150 rubles a day. A dinner with wine costs between 120 and 150 rubles.
10. The fare for taxicabs in Tbilisi is two rubles per kilometer.
